The Eyes

THIS COLUMN has contained many articles about the beauty and care of the eye, ranging from suggestions for cleansing the eyes to ideas as to

Hot wet cloths over the eyes will rest and refresh them making them larger by stretching the corners the least bit.

Beautiful eyes are healthy eyes, of course. And tired eyes are neither healthy nor beautiful. So here are a few suggestions that will rest and refresh over-strained or tired-out eyes.

Wring a towel from hot water and hold it across the eyes. The moist heat soothes the eyes, by drawing up fresh blood to strengthen them.

This same treatment will take away all trace of tears, and prevent the sore feeling and headache that follow a crying spell.

An ideal eyewash for tired-out eyes, or a wash to use mornings as soon as you are up, is made from putting the least bit of boracic acid—powdered—in a glass, with cool water over it, adding a few drops of rosewater for fragrance. Only a few tablespoonful of water, enough to fill the eyecup about four times.

A pinch of salt added to water and used as an eyewash will make the eyes look bright and feel bright. It smartens a little at first, but the eye becomes used to this. The English women bathe their eyes in weak, cold tea, and claim that their very good sight is partially due to this custom.

Massage is good, too. It should be gentle, around the sides of the eyeball, over the closed lids. Flattening the eyeball by pressing on it destroys the angles of vision, making one either near or far-sighted. So long as the eyeballs remain round, will the youth and strength of sight stay. With age comes this flattening and loss of sight.

Questions and Answers

Do you think a mole under the right arm can be removed?—Roena.

Reply—Electric needle specialists can do this for you. Their charge varies; possibly $2 a treatment is the usual price. It should take only half an hour.

I've heard that a cosmetic can be made from strawberries. This sounds as though it would be harmless and pleasant. Do you know how to make it?—T. D.

Reply—Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope and I will send you the recipe by mail.

A CORNER OF GOOD COUNCIL FOR GIRLS

The loud girl! We see her everywhere—on the streets, in the trains, at the theater—wherever people are gathered, and we wonder why she can be so indifferent to her best interests—so lacking in self-respect.

Somewhere in Shakespeare's writings there is this quotation: "Her voice was soft and low—an excellent thing in woman." In Shakespeare's time there wasn't much going on to make life pleasant for the average woman. In those times the long days were filled with hard work. Yet the girl who forgot herself—who laughed loudly in the public square must have incurred the displeasure of the Bard of Avon—otherwise he probably would have never paid such a charming compliment to the woman whose voice was "soft and low."

The loud, noisy girl, instead of attracting others, repels them. She may be wealthy, have traveled extensively, and met many prominent persons, but she will never receive the respect and consideration the woman of gentle manners receives the world over. Be Womanly.

Regardless of the "up-to-dateness" of our times—the best times humanity has ever known—the girl or woman who acts womanly is at her best, and the girl who thinks she must be loud in her speech and careless in her deportment if she would be up-to-date, is making a great mistake. The average man—the right thinking man, is not attracted by the loud girl. Indeed, it is the reserved womanly girl who appeals to him.

WOMAN WEAK, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Jamaica, N. Y.—"I suffered greatly with my head and with backache, was weak, dizzy, nervous, with hot flashes and felt very miserable, as I was irregular for two years. One day when I was feeling unusually bad my sister-in-law came in and said, 'I wish you would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.' So I began taking it and I am now in good health and am cured. I took the Compound three times a day after meals, and on retiring at night. I always keep a bottle in the house."—Mrs. L. N. BURNHAM, 35 Globe Ave., Jamaica, N. Y.

Women who recover their health naturally tell others what helped them. Some write and allow their names and photographs to be published with testimonials. Many more tell their friends.

If you need a medicine for Women's Ailments, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) for anything you need to know about these troubles.

There is only one place where we overlook loud manners in a girl or woman, and that place is on the stage—of late years mostly on the vaudeville stage—yet, strange to say, women who portray these parts are, generally in private life, the personification of refinement and soft speech.

Gum chewing, laughing and talking loudly on the street or in public places demonstrate that the girl who indulges in these practices is sadly lacking in good breeding.

Respected and Admired.

Every girl is made happy by knowing that she is respected and admired, but she will be neither respected nor admired unless she sets up the right kind of a standard and lives up to it.

The girl of gentle deportment can travel alone at any time, in any place and under any circumstances, free from unwelcome attentions.

Good manners are not the possessions of the wealthy, as many young persons seem to think. Many a simple old soul who goes out to hard work daily, if she would keep body and soul together, is a model of refined speech and deportment.

Quiet manners give any girl or woman a certain dignity, and the girl or woman who deports herself in the right way—who first of all respects herself—is always the recipient of the whole souled consideration and courtesy.

WOMEN'S HEADGEAR IS DELIGHTFULLY SIMPLE

Never within recollection have little semi-trimmed hats been more delightful than at present. Some of the smartest hats of the day are those practically guileless of trimming. The shape, color and poise of the chapeau is the all-important thing, and the trimming generally consists of two or three big flat blossoms, or merely petals laid flat round the crown, or a couple of wings perched jauntily at each side. The lining of the brim with some contrasting shade, too, gives the new hats a particular cachet.

The extraordinary thing about them is that although these simple hats are legion in number there are no two alike. No milliner worthy the name would admit so little originality, as to allow such duplication. It seems, too, that there is little of the middle course about this season's hats—they are either very large or quite small, outspread Mercury wings, which look as if they were really in flight and seem a most appropriate decoration.

COMFORTABLE HEADGEAR

The little hats are quite the most comfortable kind of headgear for motoring, traveling, or walking on a windy day and the new full veils falling all round them and draped to rather greater length at the back than in front are most becoming and attractive. There is a great craze for hats of Georgette or aeroplane, which materials are lost to all their natural transparency by using several layers over one another in order to get the desired opaque effect. For these large hats of Georgette, quite the most enchanting decoration is provided by shaded peony petals laid flat round the crown, or covering it altogether, while on the brim they are sandwiched between layers of tulle and look for all the world as though they had been blown there by the wind.
